A Message From Your Chapter Chair

I am often slow to adopt new technologies. It is strange now to think that one of my larger customers necessitated I get e-mail because that was the way they were going to submit all of their purchase orders. I am not on facebook and I have no intention to do so. I bought my first flip cell phone when the iphone was in the 4th or 5th generation. I do now have an iphone. Interestingly, I am on instagram. It was necessary to keep up with my nephews and nieces. As long as I was checking it out occasionally, I decided to follow ADK.

Recently I found myself in the Adirondacks with my family, and a visiting Aunt and cousin. While checking out instagram, I was pleasantly surprised to find that a free guided hike by a naturalist was available at Heaven’s Hills in Lake Placid. Our guide, Tamarack Tom (yes, I should have gotten his real name) was entertaining and informative. The trails were a nice level stroll through varied terrain. My Aunt fully enjoyed the experience.

I originally joined ADK to give a couple of bucks to an organization that was supporting my playground. I found the guided hike another way that ADK gave back to me, and it is something my family will do again. And there are ways other than “Adirondac” to learn about what the club is doing. From the Director

Four times a year I travel to Lake George and willingly sit for six hours on a folding chair in a huge log walled storage room with a cement floor. I am not alone. There are about fifty others there with me. It is a diverse group of men and women with a common dress code of jeans and hiking boots. We are members of the ADK Board. As the Director for the Binghamton Chapter I am there to represent you. I am surrounded by directors, officers, committee chairs and Staff members. All are dedicated to the mission of ADK. There are reports, motions, discussions and approvals. Time passes quicker than expected. On the ride home I ponder over what to report to the chapter. My head is full. I am amazed at what the club is accomplishing. I can’t begin to describe all the things that are going on, so in short:

1. We are fiscally sound with a solid plan to procure monies and grow our investments.
2. Steps are being made to engage the younger population in order to ensure ADK’s continuance.
3. Opportunities to enjoy the outdoors abound. See the online calendar at www.adk.org. Activities from all the chapters are listed.
4. Conservation and preservation activities are ongoing. A big thank you to those who responded to your representatives via email concerning a last minute state budget item. Those easy email letters do make a difference!
5. There are several opportunities to “pay forward” either with time or monetarily.

Feel free to contact me with comments, questions or concerns, Donna Coon

Presentation on High Peaks Summit Steward Program - By coordinator Julia Goren

Summit stewards protect New York’s alpine ecosystem through education, trail work, and research. These fragile plant communities are found only on the highest mountains of the state. The High Peaks Summit Steward Program is a partnership of ADK, the Adirondack Chapter of the Nature Conservancy (TNC), and the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC).

Summit stewards educate hikers to enlist their help in protecting alpine species from trampling. They hike to the summits of the tallest mountains every day and speak with every visitor about protecting alpine plants from human trampling by staying on the solid rocks. They are on Mt. Marcy and Algonquin Peak seven days a week from the beginning of June through Labor Day.

Summit Stewards also do trail work to protect alpine plants. They build scree walls and cairns to guide hikers and define the trail, and they pack areas with rock to prevent soil erosion.

ADK’s Education Director and long time Summit Steward Coordinator Julia Goren will join us Tuesday April 12 at 7pm at Chenango Town Hall to regal us with the program and her experiences. Julia will be joined by Catherine Forbes, the ADK Development Director.

Chapter Equipment for Rent
The Chapter has 4 pairs of Crampons and 2 pairs of Microspikes available for rent at a rate of $5 per week. Crampons are necessary equipment for winter hikes in the Catskills and Adirondacks to traverse ice that is frequently found on trails. Microspikes are increasingly viewed as necessary equipment for late fall/early winter and early spring when snow or ice conditions make snowshoes and crampons poor tools of travel, yet bare booting becomes precarious. The Chapter Equipment / Rental policy is available on the Yahoo Group listserv and the web site. Contact Outings Chair Pat Conners at pat_connors_ny@yahoo.com to rent items or for more information.

Meeting and Outing Reports

Winter Grace Camp Outing – by Pat Connors
This winter’s Binghamton ADK chapter trip to Grace Camp consisted of myself, my daughter Colleen and chapter member Bob. We drove up on Sunday, arriving at the Garden about 3:00PM. There was very little snow but due to the recent melt the parking area was virtually a large skating rink. Our microspikes crunched loudly as we hiked along. The weather was overcast and the temperature was comfortable in the 20’s. The three mile hike back into Grace Camp was uneventful and we arrived by 5:00 PM or so. We unpacked and settled into the cabin. The plan was to wake up early and hike up the Orebed trail and then over Gothics to Armstrong and to Upper Wolfjaw and then back down the Wolfjaw trail to Grace Camp.

We were on the trail by about 8:00. Since there was no snow we left the snowshoes behind. We started out in microspikes and had our crampons in our packs. We made good time and soon arrived at the Orebed lean to. By this time there was a covering of about 2-3 inches of snow. We hit the slide which, of course, was a solid river of ice. We considered changing into crampons but the microspikes seemed adequate as long as we were careful. We made it to the Gothics/Saddleback col and started up the Range Trail toward the cables. When we hit the bottom of the cables we changed to our crampons and started up the steep, exposed, but exhilarating, route. The cables were intermittently buried in ice and snow and frequently ice encrusted themselves. We ascended steadily and carefully with me anxiously watching Colleen (and Bob too I guess!) as they negotiated the ice and exposed areas. Luckily the weather was good…cloudy but little wind with good views. At the top of the cables we stopped and caught our breath and enjoyed the view back toward Saddleback. We pressed on and soon were at the Gothics summit. We stopped for lunch and enjoyed the views which were magnificent.

We pressed on but the trail was not always obvious and we lost the track. I wandered around looking for it and fell into a couple of spruce traps up to my waist….Plenty of snow up on the summit! We found the trail and on we went. The hike to Armstrong was easy. We stopped at the summit and enjoyed the glorious view. The view back to Gothics was awesome. We pressed on to Upper Wolf Jaw. Everything was ice at this point with many large ice flows engulfing the trail. The going was very slow as we picked our way carefully up and down the ice flows using trees and tree branches for any kind of support and help. We hit the summit rock on UWJ and stopped for a minute but I was anxious to get down over the last bump and down into the Wolfjaw col. I knew the trail down was steep and worried about the ice. The trip down became a slow, careful crawl as we encountered ice flow after ice flow. A couple of times we used ropes strung around trees to lower ourselves. I really started to worry about the big rock face where the ladders were. Soon we were at the ladders and it looked as bad as I had feared….solid ice totally encased the top 3 or 4 rungs and just getting to the ladder looked extremely treacherous but below those rungs there was good footing. I got my ice ax out and crept backwards cautiously toward the ladder using my front points and ice ax. I got to the ladder and dug the ax in hard and used it to anchor myself as I lowered myself past the ice encased rungs. At this point I was committed as I swung out and down and my feet found the exposed rungs. After securing my footing on the rungs. I used my ice ax to chomp steps for the others and chopped out the iced up rungs. Bob and Colleen carefully climbed down and soon we were at the bottom of the ladder and pretty glad to be past it. We continued on battling the ice flows at every turn. At last we hit the col and the hiking got easier. We trudged down and were back at the cabin by about 5:00PM.

At the cabin we wearily took off our gear and Bob cooked up a hearty dinner of sheppard’s pie. It started to snow lightly and the temperature dropped. After we ate we spread our gear out to dry and were asleep by 9:00. It started to lightly snow during the evening and the temperature dropped. The next morning we packed up and started out in cold, crisp air and about 2-3 inches of new snow. The snow made the woods a wonderland but made the trail treacherous, hiding the solid ice under a covering of powder. Two times I slipped and wiped out as my foot slipped on the glare ice…but after the day before it was merely an amusing annoyance. Soon we were at the Garden where we packed up the car and started the long trip home. It had been a rugged and enjoyable hike and a great ice filled adventure that we would not soon forget.

The Fire Tower Challenge - by Erik Gregory
I’ve been bitten by the “Fire Tower Challenge” gauntlet put down by the Glens Falls – Saratoga Chapter of ADK. I wrote about Pillsbury Mountain in a 2014 newsletter, and mentioned that I had also done Bald Mountain in the Adirondacks, and Hunter Mountain on one of our Winter Chapter hikes. Since then I’ve also hiked Hurricane Mountain, which had some great views, particularly since I did it in November 2014 and there was already snow on the ground.

LYON MOUNTAIN FIRE TOWER
Mid-September 2015 we took a vacation to Chazy Lake, and the Lyon Mountain trailhead was only 2 miles from where we were staying – the perfect opportunity to hike another Fire Tower peak. The place where we were staying had a golf cart for our use, so I took the golf cart to the trailhead on September 17th – definitely a first.

The new Lyon Mountain trail was completed in 2008 by ADK’s Professional Trail Crew, and they did a great job! The new trail replaces the old 2.5 mile trail that went straight up the mountain with a 3.4 mile trail incorporating 2 bridges and 11 switchbacks. You can still hike the old trail if you want, but the new trail is great to hike and easy on the legs. At my pace there was a stream about every 30 minutes. (OK, the middle stream was more like a trickle, but you could get water from it if you needed water.) The grade made it easy to maintain pace, and the warming temperatures (the day would top out at 80 degrees) made it a comfortable hike. The new trail finally crosses the old trail high up the mountain, switchbacks a couple more times, then joins the old trail for the final short distance to the top. The views on top are great, particularly to the East from a rocky ledge. (My first photo is from the top of the tower.) A Student Conservation Association group was finishing their work on tower refurbishment the day I was up there (Photo #2), but I was able to go up the tower and get the complete view from the cab while they were on their lunch break. There was a little bit of haze in the distance, but I could still see Lake Champlain (about 25 miles away) and the Green Mountains in Vermont.
September 27th, 2015, was a beautiful day for a hike in the Lake George Region – another opportunity to hike a fire tower peak. It’s about an hour from Lake George village to the trailhead, driving via Whitehall. The trail is a well-maintained 2.8 mile trail that takes you to the top without much difficulty. I was surprised at how few trees had turned color – there were a lot more trees turning color in Binghamton. There’s no water on this route, so you need to plan on taking everything that you’re going to need.

I knew in advance that this was not a fire tower that you could climb – the site has been taken over as a communications facility. As you approach the top the first thing you see is the windmill that’s been put in place to provide power to the facility (Photo #1). There’s fencing around the tower base now, and also solar panels inside the fence to help with power (Photo #2).

Since there’s no way to climb higher, the views are restricted to those that can be seen from the rock outcroppings on the North side of the peak. The view up the North arm of Lake George is spectacular (Photo #3). You can hike this peak using a loop trail, so I decided to complete the loop and leave the top heading South. This trail is steeper, and drops quickly, but it’s not uncomfortable to descend. On the way down there’s a rock outcropping that affords a good view of the Lake George narrows and the area around Bolton Landing and Green Island (Photo #4). In a mile the trail drops to the level of the Black Mountain Pond area. There’s a fork to the West that descends further to Black Mountain Point on Lake George. The other fork returns to the trailhead passing in the vicinity of several ponds, most of which are at least 50% filled in with vegetation. This return trail is another 3.2 miles from the junction, making the total return on this route 4.2 miles. For the first couple of miles there’s also quite a bit of up and down to the trail. All in all a good hike on a nice fall day.
